Healthy Living Tips

This time of year with temperatures rising it is easy to have tempers rise too. Here are some tips to help manage anger in a healthy way:

- 1. Take a deep breath: By breathing deeply, we send oxygen to the brain, enable ourselves to think clearly, and calm the body. Then we can more easily detach from feelings of anger, hurt, or upset. .
- 2. Use positive self talk: The good news is - we can gain control over our negative reactions by replacing angry thoughts with positive ones. This, combined with deep breathing will help restore us to a place of groundedness in the face of anger.
- 3. Observe your own reactions: By taking a step back and observing, we regain control over our emotions.

Catch these in more tips in the New Horizons Counseling Service Anger Management Programs! To join or send a referral call our office at 623-939-6567.
